

ABSTRACT

A method and system of coupling a memory device to a downhole device while the device is at the surface, writing of data to the memory device while the downhole device is within the borehole, and then transferring the data to a surface computer by removing the memory device (once the downhole device is at the surface) and coupling the downhole device to the surface computer.